

Eating behaviours and eating disorders in children and young people

Friday 6 November 2015; 8.55am with registration until 4.00pm

The Cedars Suite, Whiteknights Campus, University of Reading RG6 6UR

OVERVIEW

ACAMH Oxford and Reading Branch invite you to attend their conference on the subject of feeding and eating disorders. Reflecting the complexities of feeding and eating disorders in children and young people, this conference will have a broad focus, encompassing neuroimaging, parent-child interactions around food, cognitive processing style in children and adolescents with Anorexia Nervosa, and partnership in treatment.

This conference will be suitable for child and adolescent mental health researchers and practitioners, as well as those in other services supporting young people with eating disorders. In keeping with ACAMH's commitment to multi-disciplinary research and practice, we will bring together researchers and clinicians to share their knowledge so you can take away useful ideas grounded in evidence to facilitate your own professional development.

SPEAKERS

Dr Ciara McCabe is an Associate Professor of Neuroscience at the University of Reading (Head: Neuroimaging of Reward Group) where she collaborates with preclinical psychopharmacologists, clinicians (Charlie Waller Institute and Berkshire Health Foundation Trust, NHS) and industry scientists.

Dr Emma Haycraft, Senior Lecturer in Psychology, School of Sport, Exercise and Health Sciences, Loughborough University, Leicestershire. Emma's research focuses on parent-child interactions around food. She has conducted numerous research studies which have explored eating behaviours in children and adolescents, as well as investigating the impact of parental eating behaviours on their child feeding practices.

Dr Kate Harvey is an Associate Professor in the Department of Psychology at the University of Reading. Her research focuses on children's eating. Current studies are exploring predictors of fussy eating; interventions aimed at reducing food fussiness and supporting healthy and happy family eating; and the impact of food insecurity on children and families.

Katie Lang is a researcher from the Institute of Psychiatry, Psychology and Neuroscience, working with children and adolescents with anorexia nervosa and their families. Her work is focused on the cognitive and socio-emotional profile of young people with anorexia and the translation of these findings into clinical practice

Dr Tony Jaffa is a Consultant Child and Adolescent Psychiatrist. He was formerly Clinical Director in Cambridge & Peterborough NHS Trust, where he also ran the eating disorder and adolescent units. Since retiring from the NHS, he has continued his clinical work in the private and voluntary sectors.
